“ Marvin, can be best described as "Hail fellow well met." Marvin was a regular at Temple services and always had a friendly Shabbos greeting. When he spoke at one of our discussion groups the attendees valued his opinion and listened as he would give a solution to a problem or the correct answer to a question. Marvin, will be missed. I am sorry for his family's loss.

Dr Fishbaum, as one of my Economics professors at ISU, during the Vietnam era , was influential in my early recognition of the war and it's impact upon our economy. His observations and how he taught my fellow graduate students and I to look at the world not only from social and political viewpoints, but from an "economic" perspectives, has influenced me throughout my career.

I can still recall, after over 54 years, his dry, deft humor and flawless logic.

*Thank You, Dr Fishbaum, please rest in Peace,
